

Ballard, Richard

PROTEST AND REQUEST FOR RECONSIDERATION (RCW 51.52.050)

Limitations on time to act

The worker's attorney filed a notice of appearance and protest to "any adverse orders" within 60 days. More than seven months after it issued a claim allowance order, the Department issued an order affirming claim allowance. The employer appealed. Held: The worker's general protest didn't reasonably put the Department on notice that the worker was requesting action inconsistent with claim allowance. And the Industrial Insurance Act doesn't permit the Department to issue an affirming order five months after the claim allowance order had become final and binding.In re Richard Ballard, BIIA Dec., No. 23 14950 (2024)

Scroll down for order.

BEFORE THE BOARD OF INDUSTRIAL INSURANCE APPEALS
STATE OF WASHINGTON

IN RE: RICHARD M. BALLARD) DOCKET NO. 23 14950
)
CLAIM NO. BH-93541) DECISION AND ORDER

In 2022, Richard M. Ballard was injured while working for Central Washington Asphalt, Inc. He was injured while riding a work bus from a job site. Mr. Ballard filed a workers' compensation claim. On August 29, 2022, the Department of Labor and Industries issued an order allowing the claim. On April 6, 2023, with no party protesting or appealing the August 29, 2022 order allowing the claim, the Department affirmed it. The employer appealed the April 6, 2023 order.

Mr. Ballard filed a motion for summary judgment. He asks that the employer's appeal be dismissed. The Department joined in the motion. They argued that the Department's August 29, 2022 order became final and binding and that the employer was not entitled to relief. The employer argued that a protest by Mr. Ballard kept that order from becoming final and binding. The industrial appeals judge agreed with Mr. Ballard and the Department. He dismissed Central Washington Asphalt's appeal. Central Washington Asphalt petitioned for review. After a careful consideration of the record and Washington law, we agree that Mr. Ballard and the Department are entitled to summary judgment. We hold that the April 6, 2023 order must be vacated because the Department had no authority to issue it. Therefore, the April 6, 2023 order is REVERSED AND REMANDED to the Department to vacate the order.

DISCUSSION

On July 29, 2022, Richard M. Ballard injured his neck, back, and shoulder while riding a bus provided by his employer, Central Washington Asphalt, Inc. On August 29, 2022, the Department issued an order allowing Mr. Ballard's workers' compensation claim. The Department provided treatment and wage replacement benefits.

On October 20, 2022, an attorney for Mr. Ballard filed a notice of appearance; protested an overpayment order issued October 11, 2022; and included a generic protest to any orders adverse to the claimant that were filed within the previous 60 days. By the end of October 2022, Retrospective Rating Group #10636 (the Retro Group) filed the following protests:

1. On August 31, 2022, it protested the August 30, 2022 and the August 31, 2022 time-loss orders;¹

¹ Ex. 10, 12.

- 1 2. On October 3, 2022, it protested a September 27, 2022 time-loss order;²
2
3 3. On October 21, 2022, it protested a September 13, 2022 time-loss order;³ and
4
5 4. On October 21, 2022, it again protested the August 30, 2022, August 31, 2022, and
6 September 27, 2022 time-loss orders.⁴

7 The record does not show that either Central Washington Asphalt or the Retro Group protested or 8 appealed the August 29, 2022 claim allowance order.
9

10 On April 6, 2023, more than seven months after it issued the August 29, 2022 claim allowance
11 order, the Department issued an order affirming allowance. It is not clear why the Department took 12 this action. Central Washington Asphalt appealed, and that appeal is before us.
13

14 Mr. Ballard filed a motion for summary judgment, asking us to dismiss the appeal. He argued
15 that Central Washington Asphalt did not file a timely appeal of the August 2022 claim allowance order
16 and that the Department issued the April 2023 order without statutory authority to do so. Central 17 Washington Asphalt filed a cross-motion for summary judgment, arguing that Mr. Ballard's protest to 18 any adverse orders prevented the August 2022 allowance order from becoming final and binding and 19 gave Central Washington Asphalt a right to a hearing on the merits of the claim allowance. At the 20 hearing on the summary judgment motions, the Department agreed that it had no authority to issue
21 the April 2023 order and that summary judgment for Mr. Ballard was appropriate.
22

23 The parties agree that no issue of material fact exists in this case. On October 20, 2022,
24 Mr. Ballard's attorney filed what is called a generic protest. Generic protests are routinely filed by 25 attorneys as protective devices soon after a party comes to them for assistance with a workers'
26 compensation claim. They are filed to protest any adverse orders that have been recently issued.⁵
27

28 The question is whether the generic protest that Mr. Ballard filed on October 20, 2022, was a
29 valid protest of the August 29, 2022 allowance order. Did the protest reasonably put the Department
30 on notice that Mr. Ballard was seeking action inconsistent with the Department's decision?⁶
31

32 To protest or appeal the allowance order, Central Washington Asphalt had to file an appeal
33 within 60 days of receiving it or the order would become final and binding, even if it was incorrect.⁷
34 The record shows the parties timely protested several Department orders in the 60 days after the 35
36

37
38
39
40
41
42
43 _____
44 ² Ex. 16.

45 ³ Ex. 19.

46 ⁴ Ex. 17, 18, 20.

47 ⁵ In re Misael Lopez Hernandez, Dckt. No. 15 16634 at 1 (April 28, 2016).

⁶ In re Mike Lambert, BIIA Dec., 91 0107 (1991).

⁷ Marley v. Dep't of Labor & Indus., 125 Wn.2d 533, 538 (1994).

1 Department issued the August 2022 claim allowance order, but it does not show that Central
2 Washington Asphalt protested or appealed the allowance order in that time.
3

4 Here, Central Washington Asphalt argues that Mr. Ballard's generic appeal of adverse orders
5 should be construed as a valid protest of the allowance order, one that prevented the allowance order
6 from becoming final and binding. Central Washington Asphalt contends that Mr. Ballard's generic
7 protest required the Department to issue a further appealable allowance order and that, therefore,
8 the Department had statutory authority to issue the April 2023 affirming order.
9
10

11 However, the Department had authority to issue a further order only if one of the following
12 circumstances existed: (1) a protest or request for reconsideration has been filed within 60 days of 13 the date the order was communicated;⁸ (2) the Department, before the appeal deadline, asks for 14 more evidence or further investigation; or (3) the Department, within the time limited for appeal, or 15 within 30 days after receiving a notice of appeal, decides to change or reverse an order or to hold it
16 in abeyance.⁹
17
18
19

20 Mr. Ballard and the Department argue that Mr. Ballard's generic protest was insufficient to 21 prevent the August 2022 claim allowance from becoming final and binding. Under Lambert,
22 Mr. Ballard asserts, a valid protest must be reasonably calculated to put the Department on notice
23 that the party is seeking action inconsistent with the Department's decision or order. Further, the 24 Department argues, a protest has to indicate an intent to appeal and has to challenge a specific 25 Department decision or order,¹⁰ something Mr. Ballard's generic protest did not include.
26
27
28

29 In 2016, we addressed these competing arguments in appeals with similar facts.¹¹ Those 30 appeals involved Misael Lopez Hernandez, who filed a workers' compensation claim for an industrial 31 injury that occurred in January 2013. The Department allowed the claim in February 2013. In 32 April 2013, the Department issued an order setting Mr. Lopez Hernandez's wage rate and paying him
33 time-loss compensation for a short period. Also in April 2013, a representative for Mr. Lopez
34 Hernandez filed a generic protest to any adverse orders, which the Department apparently construed
35 as a protest of the wage order, because in May 2013, the Department affirmed the April 2013 wage
36 order.
37
38
39
40
41
42

43
44 ⁸ RCW 51.52.050.

45 ⁹ RCW 51.52.060.

46 ¹⁰ In re Lynette Murray (I), BIIA Dec., 41,887 (1974).

47 ¹¹ In re Misael Lopez Hernandez, BIIA Dec., 15 16635 (2016); In Misael Lopez Hernandez, Dckt. No. 15 16634 (April 28, 2016).

1 Further time-loss orders followed in fall 2013. Mr. Lopez Hernandez hired a new attorney,
2 who filed a notice of appearance in November 2013 and protested any adverse orders. In May 2015,
3 the Department issued two more orders—one affirming the February 2013 claim allowance and the
4 other affirming the series of 2013 time-loss orders. The employer timely appealed both May 2015
5 orders. The appeals were consolidated for hearing, and the judge dismissed both appeals. The 6 employer appealed the Proposed Decision and Order.
7
8
9

10 The Board determined that each case required a separate decision because of distinctive
11 determinations made in each appeal. In the first Lopez Hernandez decision (Docket No. 15 16634),
12 the Board held that the claimant's generic April 2013 protest did not reasonably put the Department
13 on notice that he was protesting the allowance order because such action was inconsistent with his 14 filing a claim in the first place. However, in the second Lopez Hernandez decision
15 (Docket No. 15 16635), the Board held that Mr. Lopez Hernandez's generic protest filed in 16 November 2013 could reasonably put the Department on notice that Mr. Lopez Hernandez was 17 protesting the time-loss compensation orders, because he could have disagreed with the amount
18 paid or the calculation used to determine his wage rate.
19
20
21
22
23

24 Central Washington Asphalt argues that the second Lopez Hernandez decision (Docket No.
25 15 16635) applies to Mr. Ballard's case, but we find that it doesn't. That decision specifically applies
26 to how a generic protest affects time-loss orders.
27

28 The first Lopez Hernandez decision (Docket No. 15 16634) applies to Mr. Ballard's case
29 because the issue is how a generic protest affects an allowance order. Central Washington Asphalt's
30 argument in the present appeal is contrary to our conclusions in the Lopez Hernandez decision. We 31 find that Mr. Ballard's generic protest did not reasonably put the Department on notice that its 32 allowance order was being protested. Mr. Ballard filed the claim, and it is inconsistent that he would 33 protest allowance of his claim.
34
35
36

37 Neither Central Washington Asphalt nor AGC (the Retro Group) protested or appealed the 38 August 2022 allowance order, so it became final and binding on or about October 28, 2022. The 39 April 2023 order must be vacated because the Department had no statutory authority to issue it.¹²
40

41 The Department and Mr. Ballard are asking us to apply the doctrine of res judicata or claim
42 preclusion to bar this appeal. To invoke the doctrine of claim preclusion, a party must establish five 43 elements as between a prior action and a subsequent challenged action: concurrence of identity . . .
44
45
46

47 ¹² Marley v. Dep't of Labor & Indus., 125 Wn.2d 533 (1994).

1 (1) of subject matter; (2) of cause of action; (3) of persons and parties; (4) in the quality of the persons
2 for or against whom the claim is made; and (5) the application of res judicata cannot work an
3 injustice.¹³ Here, the Department's prior order allowing this industrial insurance claim is the same
4 thing being challenged in this appeal. It's the same subject matter, cause of action, and identical
5 interested parties. Finally, there has been no evidence offered to explain how adhering to the earlier
6 final claim allowance order would work an injustice against Central Washington Asphalt.
7
8
9

10 Motion for Summary Judgment

11 Summary judgment is appropriate when there is no genuine issue of material fact and the 12 moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law.¹⁴ Here, all parties agreed that no material
13 facts were in dispute, and all moved for summary judgment. We agree that Mr. Ballard and the 14 Department are entitled to summary judgment. However, we do not dismiss the employer's appeal
15 as they requested. Instead, for the reasons explained above, we reverse the April 6, 2023 order and 16 remand this matter to the Department with direction to vacate the order and hold it for naught. The 17 employer's cross-motion for summary judgment is denied.
18
19
20
21

22 DECISION

23 In Docket No. 23 14950, the employer, Central Washington Asphalt, Inc., filed an appeal with
24 the Board of Industrial Insurance Appeals on April 21, 2023, from an order of the Department of Labor
25 and Industries dated April 6, 2023. In this order, the Department affirmed the August 29, 2022 order
26 allowing the claim. This order is incorrect and is reversed. This matter is remanded to the 27 Department to vacate the order and hold it for naught.
28
29
30

31 FINDINGS OF FACT

- 32 1. On June 13, 2023, an industrial appeals judge certified that the parties
33 agreed to include the Jurisdictional History in the Board record solely for 34 jurisdictional purposes.
- 35 2. Richard M. Ballard sustained an industrial injury on July 29, 2022, while 36 employed by Central Washington Asphalt, Inc.
- 37 3. The pleadings and evidence submitted by the parties demonstrate that no 38 general issue of material fact exists.
- 39 4. On August 29, 2022, the Department issued a Notice of Decision allowing 40 the claim.
41
42
43
44

45
46 ¹³ Weaver v. City of Everett, 194 Wn.2d 464, 483 (2019).

47 ¹⁴ CR 56(c).

- 1
2
3
4
5
6
7
8
9
5. No party, including Central Washington Asphalt, protested or appealed the August 29, 2022 allowance order within 60 days of when that order was communicated.
 6. The Department issued a Notice of Decision on April 6, 2023, affirming the August 29, 2022 allowance order.
 7. On April 21, 2023, Central Washington Asphalt appealed the April 6, 2023 order.

10
11

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

- 12
13
14
15
16
17
18
19
20
21
22
23
24
25
1. The Board of Industrial Insurance Appeals has jurisdiction over the parties and subject matter in this appeal.
 2. The parties are entitled to a decision as a matter of law as contemplated by CR 56.
 3. The August 29, 2022 allowance order became final and binding 60 days after it was communicated to the parties, that is, around the end of October 2022. RCW 51.52.060.
 4. The Department had no authority to issue the April 6, 2023 order adhering to the August 29, 2022 claim allowance order and the Department and Mr. Ballard proved res judicata applies. Marley v. Dep't of Labor & Indus., 125 Wn.2d 533 (1994).
 5. The April 6, 2023 order is incorrect and is reversed. This matter is remanded to the Department to vacate the order and hold it for naught.

26
27

Dated: August 30, 2024.

28
29
30

BOARD OF INDUSTRIAL INSURANCE APPEALS

31
32

HOLLY A. KESSLER, Chairperson

33
34
35
36
37
38
39
40
41
42
43
44
45
46
47

ISABEL A. M. COLE, Member

Addendum to Decision and Order
In re Richard M. Ballard
Docket No. 23 14950
Claim No. BH-93541

Appearances

Claimant, Richard M. Ballard, by Brumback & Ottem Injury Law, per Sidney P. Ottem

Employer, Central Washington Asphalt, Inc., by Pratt Horstman & Stratton, PLLC, per Gibby M. Stratton

Retrospective Rating Group, AGC Group Retro #10636 (did not appear)

Department of Labor and Industries, by Office of the Attorney General, per James A. Yockey

Petition for Review

As provided by RCW 51.52.104 and RCW 51.52.106, this matter is before the Board for review and decision. The employer filed a timely Petition for Review of a Proposed Decision and Order issued on March 19, 2024, in which the industrial appeals judge dismissed the appeal. The claimant filed a response to the Petition for Review.

Evidentiary Rulings

The Board has reviewed the evidentiary rulings in the record of proceedings and finds that no prejudicial error was committed. The rulings are affirmed.